I guess the biggest thing I have learned is to know when to stop talking and start listening.

Next, we began building something interesting gardens to teach the kids how to grow vegetables, fruits, herbs, and flowers. This was the start of a much bigger project, including the construction of a small greenhouse to teach the kids about the importance of sustainability. We also introduced them to the concept of recycling and composting, which were new ideas for them.

We have been working with local leaders and partnering with DROP in our community to offer workshops and training sessions on sustainable agriculture. We continue to grow vegetables and herbs, and the kids are proud of their achievements.

We have also started teaching them about nutrition and healthy eating habits. We encourage them to try new foods and explore different cuisines. We have also been working with local chefs to offer cooking classes and workshops.

In the future, we plan to expand our programs to include more topics such as entrepreneurship, leadership, and community service. We believe that these skills are essential for the children’s success in the future.

We are grateful to DROP for their support and for helping us to make a difference in the lives of these children. We look forward to continuing our partnership and to see how far we can go in the future.

In conclusion, we believe that education is the key to a successful and sustainable future. We are committed to providing our children with the best possible education and to help them reach their full potential.

We are grateful for the support of DROP and of all those who have helped us along the way. We look forward to continue our work and to see how far we can go in the future.
